

Table of Contents

List of Figures — VII

Mattias Lundberg, Maria Schildt and Jonas Lundblad
Framing Lutheran Music Culture — 1

Dietrich Korsch
The Word of God and Music in Luther: Re-Reading Luther’s 1538 Rhau
Preface — 21

Eyolf Østrem
“Musicam semper amavi”: What is Remarkable about Luther’s Views on Music? — 35

Robin A. Leaver
Did the Choir Introduce German Hymns to the Wittenberg
Congregations? — 47

Grantley McDonald
Liturgical Foundations from the Court of Maximilian I and the Hope of Salvation — 69

Maria Schildt
Johann Reusch’s Zehen deutscher Psalm Davids (1551) and the Circulation of German Psalm Motets in Northern Europe — 81

Joyce L. Irwin
Luther, Mattheson, and the Joy of Music — 115

Ruth Tatlow
Reading Belief through Compositional Unity: J. S. Bach’s Response to a Lutheran Theology of Proportions — 135

Pieter Dirksen
J. S. Bach, the Fuga Contraria, and the Lutheran Concept of Umkehr — 159

Mattias Lundberg

“Defenders of music” as a Topos of Collective Self-Fashioning in Lutheran Writings from Early Modern Sweden — 183

Michaela G. Grochulski

Luther in Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy’s Hymn of Praise — 199

Jonas Lundblad

The “Lutheran Style”: Aesthetics, Theology and Politics in Oskar Söhngen’s Writings — 239

Chiara Bertoglio

Beyond “Church-dividing” Differences: Music and New Ecumenical Perspectives on Justification — 283

John Butt

Lutheran Music Culture – A Reflection — 303

Appendix 1: Martin Luther’s 1538 draft to the Encomion musices — 307

Appendix 2: Preface by Johannes Bugenhagen to Balthasar Resinarius: Responsorium numero octoginta de tempore, 1544 — 311

Appendix 3: Preface by Philipp Melanchthon to Johann Reusch: Zehen deutscher Psalm Davids, 1551 — 317

Index of Names — 321